So, on the post page, what I want is...

-  This brand logo needs to be changed and replaced.

There should be a search box where I've placed that black box on the page so I can look up contacts; otherwise, how am I supposed to find a specific contact quickly? I can't just keep scrolling all the time. Also, implement an algorithm here that lists the person who has made the most purchases at the very top. For those who haven't made any purchases, arrange their names in alphabetical order—listing them after the buyers—since the list includes other contacts as well.

Now, look closely at this page: if a walk-in customer wants to return and is willing to share their contact details, I need a 'Save Contact' button here. Essentially, if walk-in customers wish to become regular customers, I should be able to save their information so I can keep track of them and analyze their data in the future; therefore, there needs to be a fully functional button for this purpose.

Why are there separate buttons for 'WS 1' and 'WS 2' on this page? There should just be a single 'Wholesaler' button. My system doesn't use a uniform price for every wholesaler; I need to set different rates for different wholesalers, so I need a system that accommodates that.

When I click the 'Wholesaler' button, a popup should appear asking me to either add a new wholesaler or select one I've already saved. If I'm adding a new one, it should prompt me for the necessary details—name, phone number, address, etc.—and these fields must be mandatory; the process shouldn't proceed without them. Once I've entered the wholesaler's details, it should move to the next step: specifying the order requirements (e.g., which variety of mangodi they want). Crucially, it should only display the mangodi varieties currently in my inventory. Then, it should record the order and send the bill to their WhatsApp number. The message should also specify the delivery timeframe so the wholesaler is fully informed, which helps create a professional impression. After the order is placed, the wholesaler should be added to my customer list. If they place another order—say, 10 days later—clicking the 'Wholesaler' button should show their name. This should work for any saved wholesaler contact, allowing me to select them and take their order easily. The entire workflow should operate this way, and I also need an option to edit the wholesaler's details later if necessary.
